BBC Gardeners' World Live Special Edition Winners Announced

The one-off, late summer edit of BBC Gardeners' World Live, the 'Special Edition', opens tomorrow (Thursday 26th August) for a fabulous four-day garden extravaganza at the NEC, Birmingham.

Managing Director for BBC Gardeners' World Events, Rachel Poletti-Gadd, said: "We are thrilled to be back in Birmingham after more than two years away. It's a joy to be working alongside such a fantastic team of designers, landscapers, contributors and exhibitors to put on this event and to see it all coming to life again."

After a morning of assessments, the organisers are delighted to announce the awards.

The accolade of Best Show Garden was awarded to Woodland Fall by Antony Nutley and Tom Wooldridge of Anthony Lionel Landscapes.

Tom said: "We were unbelievably elated when we heard we had won the award. We never expected it but it was something we always hoped for. To be given this award amongst such accomplished landscaping industry peers is humbling."

The Best Construction Landscaper was awarded to What Lies Beneath by The APL in collaboration with award winning garden designer Professor David Stevens.

Mark Gregory led the Show Gardens Assessment, with Richard Barnard and Jim Buttress assessing the Beautiful Borders and Floral categories.

Head Assessor, Mark Gregory, said: "It's a privilege to be asked to judge gardens of this calibre. This year's show has certainly set the bar very high. It is an absolute joy to welcome back such an incredible array of gardening talent, and to acknowledge the hard-work and dedication behind it all."

Best exhibit in the Floral Marquee, the Geoff Hamilton Award, went to Larchfield Trees.

The show opens to the public tomorrow and runs until Sunday 29th at the NEC in Birmingham.
